

African Safari 147

Type/Color of Stone: Granite, Evergreen

Overall Height and Width: 40" Wide, 32" Tall

During the consultation with the customer she mentioned that her late husband enjoyed spending his holidays in Africa on Safaris. Using this inspiration, I worked with our designer, Rob Pressman, to come up with a design that incorporated, what we strongly felt, to be the spirit of an African Safari.

After learning that the late husband's favorite color was green, a beautiful piece of Evergreen Granite was chosen. This color choice led to the very natural feeling of the final stone as well as incorporating another personal aspect of the deceased.

The main feature of the stone is the overarching canopy of the Acacia Tree. The branches and leaves were carved out of the stone to create a foliage design while still using the natural formation of the rough pitched granite. Under the branches we find the late husband's most prized game, the African Elephant and the Cape Buffalo.
