Bob and Sandra knew they wanted to be cremated upon passing. This topic was constantly on their mind as Sandra had been battling cancer for two years. They assumed their options were limited to a highly impersonalized, standard columbarium, but upon our initial meeting learned that there was no limit to the possibilities.

They wisely chose to do something special, and given the fact that Sandra had just gone into Hospice, a design was quickly produced. The memorial is designed to complement the historic cemetery setting in which it resides, and features Sandra's favorite, daisies, sculpted into the cap.

Sandra passed away a few days later, but knowing that her memory would forever be so beautifully preserved brought Sandra great comfort in her final days.
